This is an interesting topic and one that there is much debate. The first day of automotive school I was taught to expect at least 40% of the shop rate and 50% with a specialty like transmissions or emissions because it required extra schooling and tools. In 1985 at age 19 when I started at my first dealership the shop rate $27 an hour and I was paid $13.50 of it with full benefits for the wife ...

We're always on hand to help you with a flat tyre, but if you fancy being a bit more independent, here's how to have a go yourself. If you've got a new car, it's quite likely you'll have a tyre puncture repair kit in the car rather than a spare wheel. If this is the case, familiarise yourself with your kit, so you'll know what to do if you do get a puncture.
