So, no controls on the left side steering wheel work (volume up down and blue tooth/seek), but all controls on the right side do (cruise). However, the other day my wife had the steering wheel FULLY CRANKED all the way to the left, and the left-sided controls began working. They will work, but only if the steering wheel is cranked all the way left.

My radio controls on the steering wheel do not work EXCEPT (get this...) when I have the wheel turned. I don't have to turn it much, maybe 10 degrees in either direction, for the controls to start working again. Certainly it is a wiring issue inside the column but what I want to know is how much of an effort it is to fix this myself.
